Flier Pinned to Wreckage in Early Today

Crashing Party Find After 18 Hours of Searching

SKULL IS FRACTURED

Dropped Low to Avoid Dense Fog and Strikes Tree

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 15.—(AP)—Frank Goldsborough, daring 19 year old aviator, was found alive in the wreckage of his plane.

Physicians and surgeons fear that he has ended his flying career, in a statement issued from the Putnam Memorial hospital here this morning it was said that he was suffering from a fractured skull and his condition was critical.

When the ship became lost in a dense fog Goldsborough crashed into a tree near Woodford Mountain. A large party of men, accompanied by a doctor and a nurse, searched the woods for the plane with Donald Mockler, Goldsborough's companion, attempting to retrace the latter's steps through the forest. Mockler was with Goldsborough when the plane struck the tree top while flying in a fog. Part of the plane remained in the tree, while Goldsborough was pinned in the cockpit as it fell.

After trying to extricate Goldsborough, who was alive, Mockler set out for Bennington. He wandered for five hours before finding aid.

Mockler was to deliver a lecture at Keene, N. H. and Goldsborough was acting as his pilot.

Mockler Collapses.

Donald Mockler collapsed while trying to lead a searching party to the plane in the mountains near where Goldsborough, boy aviator, lies pinned in the wreckage of his plane. Mockler, who cracked up with Goldsborough was exhausted after making his way out of the woods to Bennington for aid, but he insisted on joining the posse.

Mockler was carried to a store about eight miles from here after his collapse.

Mockler refused to be brought out after collapsing. Wrapped in blankets inside camp fires, he stayed with the party to continue the search tomorrow morning.

Mockler said Goldsborough may have broken both legs and suffered a fractured skull in the accident.

Mockler was thrown clear of the plane, he said. Apparently Goldsborough saved himself from being pinned to death, for the ignition of the plane had been cut off.

Woodford Mountain is one of the highest spots in the unbroken country that lies in a triangle between Bennington, Brattleboro and the Massachusetts line near Greenfield, Mass.

Frank Goldsborough, 19-year-old who crashed near Bennington, is the son of Brice Goldsborough, who lost his life in the "Dawn," Miss. James Wilson Grayson's plane which appeared in the North Atlantic in November, 1927, during a hop from New York to Newfoundland, prepared to a projected flight to Croydon, England.

A youthful airman holds three under transcontinental flight records. He passed tests for a private flying license last November and set out from Springfield, N. J., last April on his transcontinental flights.

He set a new junior record for an east crossing of the continent to Los Angeles and returned to New York in record time. The round trip took 62 hours and 21 minutes was a junior record.

He searched and found the wreckage with the finding of the wrecked plane. It had been about eighteen days since the crash occurred it was located.

Hoover To Attend Legion Convention

President Assures Commander Bodenhamer He Will Attend

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Herbert Hoover will attend the 12th annual national convention of The American Legion in Boston at the first session, October 6, the President told O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander of the Legion, at the conclusion of the national commander's recent call at the White House. The invitation to attend the Boston convention had been extended to the President last spring by the national commander, and it had been under favorable consideration by the President since then.

Commander Bodenhamer called at the White House to express the appreciation of the World War veterans at the President's approval of five legislative measures passed by the congress in which the Legion has been interested. The measures were the disabled men's bill, the measure to consolidate all veterans' activities under one head, the Rogers hospital bill supplying 4,500 additional beds for disabled veterans, the measure to investigate the feasibility of universal service in time of war, and the extension of five years in which to apply for adjusted compensation.

The session of the Legion's national convention, which the President will attend as well as the other three days' sessions, will be held in the arena in Boston, which seats some 12,000 persons, and is ideal for such an occasion. The arena is oval in shape, with a floor space that will seat 6,000 and from this floor ranging upward in tiers all around, the arena are another 6,000 seats.

Birthplace Of Col. Lindbergh For Sale

Engineering Society Fails to Carry Out Plans For Purchase

DETROIT, July 15.—(UP)—The little frame house in which "Charlie" Lindbergh, as he was then known, was born, is for sale with no takers. The price is $12,500, and it includes the bronze tablet which marks the spot as Lindy's birthplace.

A year ago the Swedish engineering society made a down payment on the structure, thereby apparently settling the controversy which has stormed about it sporadically since that memorable day when the "Lone Eagle" glided down to fame on Le Bourget field in Paris.

The society planned to use the house as a meeting place and also to make of it a museum of Lindberghiana, by collecting as many as possible of the objects associated with the flier and his noteworthy flight. But it has been discovered that the neighborhood is too noisy for the intense concentration necessary to meetings of engineers and the society has regretfully returned the house to the owners.

Some time ago a Chicago promoter tried to buy the place and make of it a museum with a gatefee but was hauled by the owner. Later, considerable excitement was caused by the discovery that the tenant occupying the house at that time had covered the significant little bronze tablet with a "Rooms For Rent" sign.

So today the birthplace of Col. Charles Lindbergh is for sale for $12,500, $1,500 down.

Birmingham Bank Robbed of $24,000 By Three Bandits

Two of Trio Enter Bank and Tie Employees With Ropes

MAKE GOOD ESCAPE

Currency Wrapped in Overcoat and Carried Out to Car

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 15.—(AP)—Biting a bookkeeper with small cord and holding a pistol in his mouth until the combination of the vault was revealed, three bandits leisurely robbed the Woodlawn American National Bank and escaped in an automobile with approximately $24,000 today. They fled in the direction of Gate City.

Employees of the bank as they entered for their daily duties were each tied with cord and were forced to lie down on the floor.

When William Cox, bookkeeper, arrived at the bank about 7:30 and opened the door, a man who had been standing nearby forced his way in the door behind him. A companion followed and between the two Cox was tied with cord, which the men had in their pockets. They told him to show them the combination of the safe, holding a pistol in his mouth. They are also said to have told him that a car was waiting on the outside of the building with a machine gun trained on the door.

Employees Enter
C. L. Porter, head teller, arrived shortly accompanied by John Kyle, stenographer. George Musser, another, soon came in as also did the negro janitor, Solomon Hines, followed by a customer. All of these as they came were tied and forced to lay down by the bandits.

After the vault was opened the sacks of currency were wrapped in an overcoat and carried out to the car by one of the men.

The other bandit backed out of the door telling the bound victims that if an alarm was turned in before a certain time the machine gun in the car would be put into action. Merchants and early street pedestrians were unaware of the robbery until the waiting automobile, which had not attracted any attention had sped away.

All Offers For Meteor Refused

Farmer Says He Prefers to Keep Stone Which Fell Near His Home

HEBER SPRINGS, July 15.—Scores visited the farm home of Julian Bailey, eight miles northwest of Heber Springs, today to view the meteor which fell in a field 25 yards from the Bailey home Monday morning.

The meteor weighs about 40 pounds. It is a dark, iron-hue and has metallic ring.

Bailey has received offers up to $100 for the meteor but has refused all. He prefers to keep it rather than to accept any of the offers received.

The meteor was seen by hundreds as it roared through space, coming from the northeast. A dense cloud of smoke appeared in its wake. Two loud explosions were heard just before it struck and some witnesses said the meteorite was torn to pieces with one or more larger fragments resuming their course.

Mrs. Bailey rushed to the front door just in time to see the cloud of dust arising from the spot where the stone fell. It was buried 15 inches in the third ground.

Trial For Veteran Charged With Wife Murder Is Started

Bride of Six Weeks Was Found Dying in Shallow Well

SAYS WIFE FELL IN

Davis Is Discovered Near the Well on Day of Fatality

ASHDOWN, July 15.—George W. Davis, 55-year-old roving farmer and Spanish-American war veteran, is scheduled to go on trial for his life in Little River county circuit court here today on a murder charge growing out of the death of his 54-year-old bride of six weeks, whose body was found in an abandoned well near Foreman, June 16.

Occurring at an antiquated vacant house amid the blackberry fields in a sparsely settled section about five miles northeast of Foreman, where the two had stopped on their tramp across the country, to eat lunch of berries and wild apples, circumstances surrounding the alleged killing are as peculiar as they are baffling to investigators.

And little information has been gleaned from prolonged gillings of the stalwart itinerant, who has maintained a grim silence in the county jail here since a few hours after the death of his bride.

"She got drunk and stumbled in the old well while I was off looking for apples," the veteran mumbled when arrested. Efforts to lead Davis into a more detailed account of the tragedy have been fruitless.

Little River county's prosecutor, John J. DuLaney, who has headed the investigation, found himself in the middle of the most difficult and mysterious case of his career in the outset, the entire case being based practically all on circumstantial evidence.

As the result, DuLaney has amassed a wealth of physical facts with which he expects to obtain the supreme penalty for the romantic and carefree rover, he said.

The state's star witness is expected to be W. J. Gilbert, former Oklahoma restaurant owner, who testified at the preliminary hearing in Foreman shortly after Davis' arrest, that he and his wife came upon Davis at the well as he carried an armful of planks and rubbish.

Gilbert and his wife, both aged, were picking blackberries in the vicinity on the day of the alleged killing they told officers. They were visiting a daughter nearby, and were on an annual berry picking tour of the countryside.

"We stopped at the fence," Gilbert testified at the preliminary hearing, "but the man (Davis) did not know we were about until I cleared my throat. When he saw us he propped the planks at the side of the well and came over and talked to us about berry picking, the weather and other things."

After talking for probably five minutes Gilbert said Davis stopped them as they turned to leave and declared that he had a "terrible accident," declaring that his wife had fallen into the well.

"Well Was Covered"
DuLaney's biggest weapon in his contention that Davis beat his wife over the head with a board and threw her body into the well will probably be Gilbert's testimony that the well was covered completely over "except for about 12 inches on one side, not big enough for a body to pass through."

The witness testified at Foreman that Davis tried to persuade him to go into the well and bring his wife to the top, but he said he refused, Davis going to the bottom of the well, which was dry, and bringing her to the surface with the assistance of Gilbert.

Under the pretense that he was going to a nearby creek for water to use in the attempt to revive the woman, Gilbert and his wife fled the scene, hurrying to a telephone and summoning officers from Foreman.

Davis was at the scene when officers followed by a party of citizens, arrived at the old house. How, he was arrested and brought to Ashdown. The (Continued On Page Three)

The Farmers' Roadside Market Stand

AT this season of the year farmers favorably situated on the highways should put up roadside stands and stock them with good, fresh vegetables, milk, butter and eggs from the farm, to offer passing motorists. About the best place for such a stand is near a cool spring. If a spring is not available the trouble and expense of digging a well will soon be paid for, as tourists enjoy a good refreshing drink of water more than anything else at this season of the year.

If the spring or well is not right on the highway, a road sign a short distance ahead calling attention to the cool water on hand for thirsty tourists, could be painted and put up without any material cost.

When the folks stop to get a drink or to fill up their radiators they will buy other things.

By this means, much of the excess produce raised on the farm, that would not bring enough to make a trip worth while to town, could be disposed of at practically no marketing expense. Probably the money realized from the sale of this produce would provide the family with "coffee and sugar," money throughout the season when money is not plentiful among the farmers.

The Future of Alaska

ALTHOUGH the territory of Alaska is a fifth as large as the continental United States, it is probably one of the most misunderstood areas on the face of the globe, as far as the average American is concerned.

Most of us, no doubt, think of Alaska as a frigid northern waste where men dig for gold amid dreadful arctic storms. We think of mineral wealth as its only natural resource, and we endow it with a climate something like Greenland's.

All of this is brought to mind by a recent copy of The Industrial Bulletin, a little periodical issued in Massachusetts by Arthur D. Little, Inc. Under the heading, "Unknown Alaska," this bulletin sets forth the real facts about this huge territory—and predicts a prosperous future for it.

To begin with, Alaska's summer climate is as pleasant as that of the United States. Winter conditions depend on the locality; in the north they are severe, but in the south-east they are as mild as in Washington, D. C.

The territory is equipped to become an enormously productive agricultural region. The yield of wheat and potatoes is unusually high, the growth of grasses is luxurious enough to support huge herds of cattle, and fruits and vegetables can be grown to advantage in the southern section.

Alaska's vast forests have hardly been touched so far. Her gold and copper mines are famous; in addition, the territory has extensive coal deposits and a considerable quantity of tin, together with extensive limestone and marble deposits. Geologists believe that it also contains huge oil fields that will some day be of high importance.

All in all, this would seem to indicate that Alaska is far from being the frigid, God-forsaken place that most of us have assumed. Gold is among the least of its natural resources. Some day, when the population of the United States has increased still further, and money for development is available, Alaska undoubtedly will come into her own as a prosperous and populous part of the United States. Nature has given the land the potentialities of greatness. Some day they will be realized.

America's Rise in Aviation

EUROPEAN nations are popularly supposed to be far ahead of America in the use of commercial aviation lines. Now, however, the American Air Transport Association is quoted by World's Work magazine as asserting that America leads Europe in air passenger travel—which is both surprising and gratifying.

London's famous airport, Croydon Field, handled 1358 passengers in one month; and in the same month the airport at Tulsa, Okla., was handling 7373. Paris' Le Bourget took care of 1850. These are the figures supplied by the magazine, and there seems no reason to doubt them.

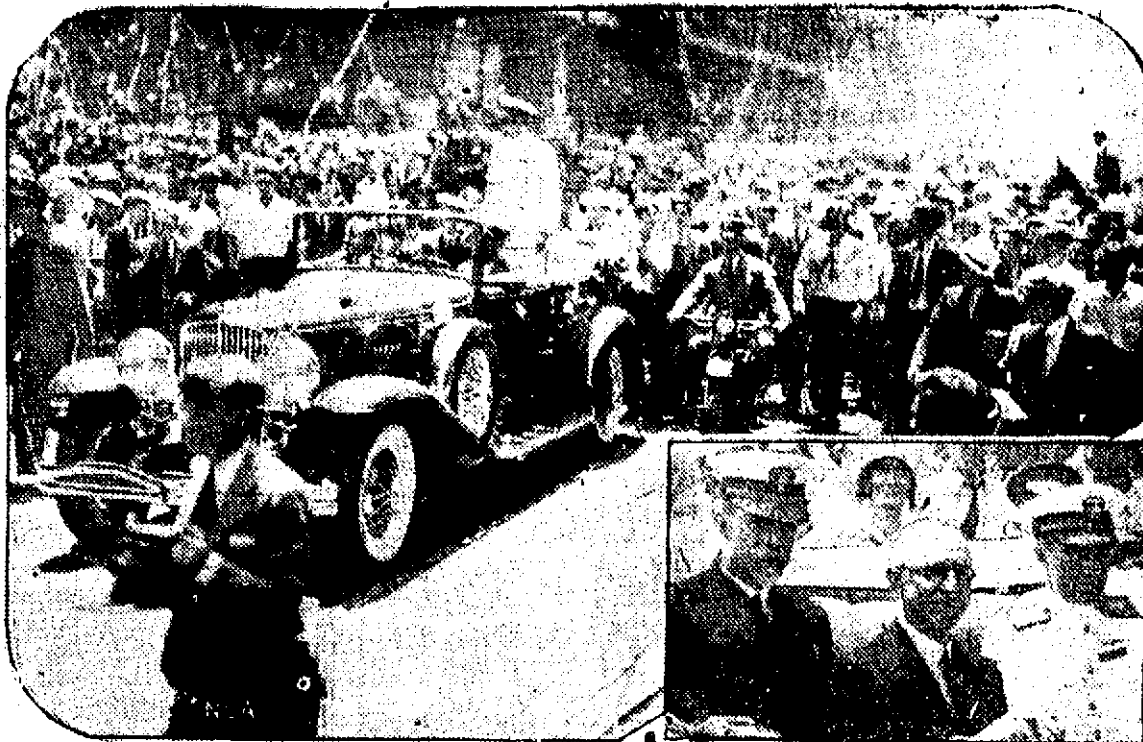

The plain fact is that commercial aviation in this country is making a steady, healthy growth. The extravagant prophecies of a couple of years ago may not be fulfilled yet, but aviation is moving forward. People are losing their fear of getting off the ground.

But while it was hot here, it was hot everywhere. The weather man seemed to have played no favorites during the heat wave that was broken yesterday.

Six months ago there was a record cold snap in this section, and six months from now, it may be that there will be thoughts of the warm weather of the past summer.

There must be something radically wrong when the population of Arkansas shows such a small gain, compared to other Southern states. Only a handful of counties in this state showed a material population increase. The cause should be found and remedied.

Auto Drivers Pay $930,000,000 Tax

Large Share of the Levy Will Be Spent on Highways

CHICAGO, July 15.—(UP)—Driving automobiles will cost Americans more than $930,000,000 in motor-taxes alone this year, or a sum equal to one-eighth of the total national debt of the United States, according to a bulletin of the American Research Foundation, just made public here.

"Of this vast sum, the 48 states will receive approximately $350,000,000 in registration fees," the bulletin states. "Gasoline taxes will account for about $422,000,000; municipalities will collect $20,000,000 in licenses, and the personal property tax on automobiles will approximate $130,000,000."

Motorists in general will reap large benefits from the money they pay in taxes since an important share of it will be spent in improving highways and adding to the nation's arterial systems, but, the bulletin warns, many automobile owners will pay taxes without getting returns for their money, due to their failure to maintain the motor efficiency of their cars.

"An automobile is more of a liability than an asset unless it is maintained in perfect running order and lubrication is one of the most important factors," the bulletin states.

"Three elementary rules stand out as fundamental knowledge for every American tourist. The first is that in the average car a heavier oil should be used after 2,000 miles of ordinary travel. The second, that a still heavier oil be used after $12,000 miles, and the third that new piston rings should generally be installed after 25,000 miles. When the worn piston rings are replaced by new ones which will store the original clearance, the motorist should again use the oil recommended for his car when new, and then change to heavier grades at additional mileages."

In the last ten years, it is stated, automobile owners of the nation have paid out a total of $5,881,000,000 in motor taxes.

Pipeline Work To Cost 259 Million

Kansas City Will Be Center of Fuel Transportation Network

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 15.—(UP)—Expenditure of $259,000,000 in this district, expected to be in full blast shortly, will make Kansas City the center of eight new pipe line projects, transporting crude oil, gas and gasoline from Oklahoma and Panhandle fields to the east.

This huge sum constitutes what is said to be the greatest pipe line expansion in history, and will place more than 6,900 miles of new pipe underground.

Two projects will pipe refined gasoline to the east with a terminal here. A river front terminal also is provided for, to serve tankers when Mississippi river navigation work is completed.

Two of the projects will pipe crude oil, one as far east as Pittsburgh. Four will supply gas over the Middle West as far north as China and Milwaukee.

At the present there are four crude oil lines from the Midcontinent fields to Chicago. There are no natural gas lines and no gasoline lines.

The Doherty-Insull-Standard project to Chicago and Milwaukee is the largest of the planned lines. This line will run from near Pampa, Texas, through Kansas to Omaha, thence east to Chicago, Gary and Milwaukee. It will be 900 miles in length and cost $110,000,000. Built of 24-inch pipe, it will carry more than 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

The $40,000,000 project of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company is second, and will run from the Texas Panhandle to Indianapolis, crossing Kansas, Missouri and Illinois. With feeder lines this will be 1250 miles without. Twenty-two inch pipe will be used.

Union Gulf corporation, subsidiary of Gulf Oil of Pennsylvania, will spend $20,000,000 for construction of 1500 miles of pipe from Cushing, Okla., to Pittsburgh via Toledo and Cincinnati, to carry crude oil.

Two refined gasoline lines are included in the program. One of these will be constructed by the Barnsdall interests and the other by the Phillips Pipe Line Company. The Phillips line will run from Borger, Texas, to Wichita, Kansas, Kansas City and St. Louis, a total length of about 800 miles.

Barnsdall will build a 6 and 8-inch gasoline system from Okmulgee, Oklahoma, to Milwaukee, costing $8,000,000.

The Ajax Pipe Line Company, Standard of New Jersey subsidiary, Tidewater Oil and the Tidal Oil companies, will carry crude oil from Cushing, Okla., to Wood River, Ill., for refining, in two lines each 400 miles long and costing $9,000,000.

A natural gas line from Steven county, Kansas, to Omaha and probably on to St. Paul is under construction, to cost about $21,000,000, and about 700 miles in length. The Kansas Pipe Line and Gas Company Insull-Studebaker interests will start a 300 mile line from Kansas pools to Nebraska towns.

The Fight on Arkansas Highway Commission

The political campaign in Arkansas has crystallized into a contest over the highway construction program.

Opposition to Governor Parnell proposes to get rid of Commissioners Blackwood, Matthews, Parks, Wilson and Williams and put in their places appointees hostile to the present program and committed to some other policy of highway construction.

It is inconceivable that the people of Arkansas would seriously consider any change in policy or personnel in the highway department.

The present highway policy has relieved road districts of burdensome taxes which have been assumed by the state. It was wrong in the beginning to penalize a county because it was progressive.

On the other hand, the counties that had no road bonds have been placed on a parity with the other counties, and naturally they have first consideration until equality has been established.

Under the present system highway funds collected from automobile licenses and gasoline tax have increased $4,000,000 a year since 1927.

Arkansas is making splendid progress. It is one of the four southern states that are outstanding in highway construction.

Prior to 1927 Arkansas had no road program. Sentiment was not crystallized. The state became road minded all of a sudden. Everybody wanted a hard surfaced road at one time.

Obviously years are required to carry out a consistent program. The state is building an average of 500 miles of hard surface roads annually. That is an extensive program, but if the present administration is continued, a few years will see the primary system completed and the secondary system rapidly developed.

Arkansas is one of the richest states in natural resources. It has developed rapidly within the past few years. Continuation of its development depends on highways which will make agricultural and mineral resources accessible to market.

The state is exceptionally fortunate in its highway commission. It is composed of men who give their time and attention to public service without desire to serve personal or political aims.

If the people of Arkansas will stand behind Governor Parnell and the highway commission, they will have no reason to regret their decision.

Quality Of Cotton Governs Market

Only Crop Where Quality Alone Governs the Selling Price

In no other line of production does quality become more important than in cotton. The farmer is the producer of cotton. Whether he produces to do so or not, in the main, he determines the quality of cotton produced.

As a rule he has little opportunity to learn to know the great importance of the quality of his product or just what quality actually means, to say nothing about having such information to serve him as a guide in his production. Both domestic and world demands should be known to the producer.

In order that this information may be had by farmers the College of Agriculture of the University of Arkansas will bring to the next Farmers' Week to be held August 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th a leading authority on this subject, L. D. Howell of the United States Department of Agriculture, to the program on Tuesday afternoon, August 5, will be to tell the farmers of Arkansas about quality of cotton required in domestic and world markets. Mr. Howell possesses a great fund of information gathered in years of study on this subject.

bride was dead when she arrived at a physician's office in Foreman. Because the well is barely nine feet deep and dry, DuLaney is expected to make an effort to prove that death would have been unlikely unless the woman was struck over the head with a club or heavy instrument.

A physician testified at the preliminary hearing that death was caused by severe blows on the head with blunt instrument upon which a profection, such as a nail, was borne. Almost a perfect character for fiction, Davis is clad in the cloth of the American army. When arrested a untidy beard covered his round face but he has shaved since, leaving a neat mustache above his grim mouth.

He told officers that he received a monthly pension from the government enough to sustain him in his wanderings, which have led from one state to another for many years.

Unlike the usual tramp, Davis roamed from one community to another not going by the railroads or highways, but through the fields and woods stopping at a farmhouse for work occasionally and then moving on.

His bride went with him after their marriage in Tennessee. They had spent the night at the home of a relative near Foreman the night before her death.

PURE POLITICAL BUNK

(Ervin Funk in Rogers Democrat)

Arkansas voters are going to meet a lot of problems when they go to the polls, next fall—and I don't refer to their selection of the best men for the offices to be filled. I am referring to the proposed constitutional amendments. You will hear a lot about them both from candidates who are trying to use these proposed amendments as stepping stones into office and directly from those who are backing the proposed changes. But there is one amendment I am absolutely opposed to on general principles and that is the move to elect seven $2,000 a year state highway commissioners, one from each congressional district. You can't get a man worth his salt in that capacity for $2,000. You can't get a man who knows how to finance and build roads to get out and make a campaign for any such piddling salary. All the state will get under that plan will be $2,000 a year politicians, who perhaps can see where the job can be made to pay something worth while. You won't get men of the type of J. S. Parks of Fort Smith who has given many times $2,000 worth of time to bettering highways of Arkansas.

MOM'N POP

"Girl From Woolworths" Coming to New Grand

Alice White, the youngest star in Hollywood, again sings and dances in her newest all-talking First National and Vitaphone picture which comes to the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday.

"The Girl From Woolworth's" is the title of the picture. It deals with the experiences of a clerk in a ten-cent store, who aspires to crash the night clubs as an entertainer. The complications that ensue when she does so, and her love affairs with a subway guard, make up an entertaining story of modern youth.

Miss White will be seen as the ten-cent store clerk, and Charles Delaney, the young Irish actor, who played with the same star in "Show Girl" and "Broadway Babies," portrays the subway guard.

"The Girl From Woolworth's" starts at a jazz party in an apartment, swings into the ten-cent store, then into a red-hot night club, with a variety of backgrounds and much action.

It was directed by William Beaudine, famous for his screen comedy offerings, and a splendid supporting cast of youngsters is seen.

"The Girl From Woolworth's" has romance, action and pep throughout. Miss White sings several songs, and also dances in the night club scenes. This talented young girl, who has never been on the stage and who was a script girl in Hollywood three years ago, has developed into one of the most promising song-and-dance artists on the screen, and she has shown in a number of pictures that she is a born comedienne.

Lon Chaney Comes to Saenger Wednesday

Lon Chaney will make his first speaking appearance on the screen Wednesday at the Saenger theater in "The Unholy Three," all-talking version of his former silent success but said to be vastly different from the earlier film in that he assumes not only two disguises but five vocal characterizations and also makes a 'ummy sing by the art of ventriloquism.

The picture is based on C. A. Robinson's story of a side-show ventriloquist who becomes involved together with a circus giant and midget in an amazing criminal plot. The ventriloquist fools the police by running a pet shop in the disguise of an old woman while the midget impersonates a baby, the clerk in the store, knowing nothing of their activities, is "framed" for a murder, but the ventriloquist's love for a girl who pleads for the boy's vindication finally prevails in a dramatic courtroom scene climax.

Interesting scenes in the production include those of the pet shop in which a wide variety of animals and birds are seen and those of the circus side-shows in which actual circus freaks play prominent parts.

In preparing for his first talking roles, Chaney asserts he employed a unique method of practicing the various characterizations. "I didn't want to be a nuisance at home," the star stated recently, "nor did I want to do it around the studio. So I practiced the different voice inflections while

The person so paying said taxes under protest may, at any time within thirty days thereafter but not afterwards, bring an action against the Commissioner for the recovery thereof, in the Chancery Court of Pulaski County; and if it is determined in said action that such taxes and penalties, if any, were wrongfully or illegally collected, any reason being shown to the contrary, the Commissioner shall be required to refund the same and to be repaid in conformity with the order of the court, in preference to other claims against the State Treasury.

There shall be no other remedy in any case of the illegal or wrongful collection of income taxes or the attempt to collect same than that provided in this Act.

JUDITH GRANT, artist, painter, lover, ALAN STEVENS, model, who is also loved by CHUMMY HYLTON, Judith's roommate and her friend, Chummy had loved Steve years ago, and last he met her when he was young, and although he loved Judith, Judith insists it is his duty to marry Chummy, whose memory comes back when she sees him again. Judith studies dancing under the great CHUMMY, and she is killed in a traffic accident, and Chummy loves her, and she is a show and she makes a sensation hit.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX

JUDY cried for two days, on and off, because Guarvenius had not been there to see her triumph—her triumph, as she called it. Had he not taught her everything she knew, and had he not been like a father to her?

Of course, she found herself in a maze of business engagements, which at first confused her very much. For instance, Matthew Tannary, who controlled vast theatrical interests all over America, offered her a three-year contract at what seemed to her an enormous salary. She refused, of course, considering herself tied to Mr. Wyon; but when she told him about it, he urged her to accept the offer.

Even to Judy's ignorance of business methods this seemed a marvelously generous action. She tried to thank him.

"But, my dear young lady, I am only too glad to have been of service to you," Wyon repeated. "My advice to you is to accept Matthew Tannary's contract, beginning after Christmas. I wish you every possible success."

He beamed on her with his rather womanish smile. He seemed actually to want her to accept this contract. She was more than touched by his kindness.

Each night her success was repeated. In fact, the enthusiasm of the audience grew greater and greater. The house was packed to overflowing.

To Judy, it was still very unreal. The roar of applause always seemed to come from a very long way off. She hardly realized that the audience was shouting at her; but her friends' praise made her very happy. Bastien devoured her performance with his ardent eyes every single night. Tony Leigh and Michael Stone and all the other boys thought her wonderful.

Everybody told her so. They drank her health when she went to the cafe one noonday. They made speeches in her honor. Michael Stone recited a poem he had written. They were almost crazy with delight in her triumph.

STRANGELY enough, little Judy Grant was an artist in the classic sense. All that Guarvenius had taught her of incessant practice and study and rigid self-discipline and early hours she had grasped and made her own, so that it was no second nature. Of her emotions Judy was ever a spendthrift, but of the energy necessary for her work, at this time of her life, she was a veritable miser. She showed no inclination to elaborate or improve her style of living. She stayed in her two modest, familiar rooms. She did not touch forth into clothes and hats; she never took a

A Catcher's Misspent Life
ROGER BRESNAHAN ought to be a millionaire instead of coaching the Tiger pitchers. All the old big league catchers should be in rocking chairs on Easy Street these days clipping coupons off fat bonds. They should have gone in to the prize fighting business where a man gets paid handsomely for taking a punch below the belt. In the course of his career, Bresnahan took hundreds of swiftly pitched foul tips in the groin. Yet old Roger assume the horizontal position of the modern fistic foul climber, holding his side and writhing in pain? He did not. He just "shook 'em off" and went on catching.

Mickey Cochrane, the alert catcher for the A's, offers some interesting testimony on the low blow in baseball.

Faster Than Fists
EVERY catcher in the leagues," says Mick, "including myself, is frequently struck in the groin with a foul tip that comes with the speed of the bat. And it comes faster than human fists can strike. Did you ever see a catcher toted away to the bench after taking one of 'em? No, you didn't. Neither did I."

A couple of years ago we had a young pitcher named Lloyd Powers. One day in batting practice, one of the boys lined back a terrific smash that struck Powers flush on his protector. It knocked him down and we ran out to see how badly he was hurt. He was up before we got there, and he went right on pitching. After practice he showed us his protector. It was dented almost flat.

"Can these boozies like Carnera or Godfrey hit like one of those line drives or like a fast pitch that is tipped foul?" Panaw! John Barrymore isn't the only great actor in the world, after all."

Watch the Ringsters
IN corroboration of Mickey's testimony, did you ever follow closely the actions of a fouled fighter from the instant he is struck until he leaves the ring? I watched Paul Scott carefully at Miami and Max Schmeling after being struck low by Sharkey in New York. Both recovered rapidly. I never will believe that either of them was hurt so badly that he could not have continued after a rest of three minutes.

Invariably boxers who are fouled are able to walk out of the ring after the decision has been rendered.

The foul blow is not as incapacitating as it is made out to be by those lily-livered lobsters who groan and thrash about the floor holding their groins as though they had just taken a flock of machine gun bullets in a vital spot. The man who invented the modern protector, which is used in most fights, will stand up there and let Sharkey, Godfrey or anybody else hit him as hard as he wishes, flush on the protector and deny any suffering.

I believe there is only one way to end fouls and that is to end them. When a boxer claims foul, let him be examined, and if he has been fouled, he should be allowed five minutes' rest. Then, on with the dance.

Veteran Postman To Quit At Eighty

Employee at Pittsburgh Rounds Out 57 Years of Service
PITTSBURGH, July 15.—(UP)—Levi E. Palmer, 80, the oldest man in active service in the United States Post Office Department, will retire August 19, after 57 years, during which time he has been located in Indianapolis, St. Louis and Toledo, and Pittsburgh. Palmer has been superintendent of mails at Pittsburgh for 40 years and when he clears off his desk for the last time he will have been in service longer than any man in the history of the Pittsburgh office.

The veteran postal superintendent served as chief railway mail clerk in the above named cities until he was transferred to Pittsburgh in 1886 in the same capacity. Four years later he was promoted to the superintendent.

When Palmer first came here only 40 clerks were employed in the dispatching office under him. Today there are 1,637 postal employees in Pittsburgh.

He has been associated with seven postmasters here, saw the opening of the present federal building in September 1891 and hopes to live to see the proposed new structure.

Civil service which was introduced in the postal department during Palmer's time has proved beneficial to both the government and postal workers and has resulted in more efficient service, he believes.

A "MACHINE" OR MEN

From Fort Smith Southwest American

A great deal of talk about "machines" is broadcast in every political campaign by the outis who want in. One might suspect that a state government is operated by machinery. But it isn't. It's operated by men.

"Machine," as used in political oratory, means only those people who are not supporting the ideas of the speaker. The world carries with it a lot of colorful adjectives—vicious, domineering, arrogant, unscrupulous, intolerable and others—all words which have been associated with "machine" by so many years that they fit together like a knife and fork.

Threadbare words and phrases which have been used so long they are familiar to every hearer make interesting speeches for candidates. But they do not produce any constructive policies. They do not carry out constructive plans. They do not remove injustices from tax systems. They do not bring school advantages to children. They do not build highways.

Only men can do those things—men with intelligence, courage, capacity and integrity.

Arkansas is hearing a great deal now about "machine" domination of state government. Let's examine it a little.

A machine, political or otherwise, is not a will of the wisp. It is not an intangible, ethereal something that defies analysis and specific description. It is a definite, tangible something. It is anything but a figment of a disordered imagination.

Who is this machine that is dominating Arkansas affairs? Who are its members? Who heads it? Where does it stay? What does it do? What does it feed on? What rights of the people has it trampled underfoot? How? When? Where?

Let's get specific about this thing. Let's not accept vague and glittering generalities. When candidates talk about machines dominating state affairs and robbing the people of their life's blood, make them get definite. Ask who is the machine and what it has done. Demand a bill of particulars.

Glancing back over the recent history of Arkansas, three big achievements stand out: the highway program, the tax reform program and the school program.

No one of those three great steps upward have been taken automatically. They weren't accomplished by pushing a button on a machine. They were achieved by the vision, the intelligence, the courage, the integrity and the capacity for achievement of men.

Were the men who have carried out the Martineau program for three years part of this machine?

Were the men who conceived the program of taxation reform, to finance state charity institutions, the school equalizing fund and reduction of the property tax—were these men part of this machine?

Were the men who put the school equalizing fund law on the statute books part of the machine—a law which eventually will assure a reasonable equality of school facilities to every child in the state?

Were the men who conceived and carried out a financing plan to make the school equalizing program work—were these men part of the machine?

A few years ago all the highways Arkansas had were paid for out of the special taxes on the adjoining lands. Various counties of the state had heavy burdens of debt, so heavy that farms were being sacrificed. Local roads were built chiefly from local property taxes. The state highway system was little more than a bunch of lines on a map. The country try school children had little school facilities. The terms were short, the buildings inadequate. They were short of money. About 85 per cent of the costs of government were being paid by taxes on property, and nearly all of that—more than 95 per cent—was tangible property such as real estate, cows, horses and machinery.

The last few years have seen a remarkable change in Arkansas! The road taxes have been lifted off the lands and put on the users of the road. The roadless sections of the state are getting roads built, at the rate of $2 for every dollar spent on the old bonds. The state highway commission is responsible for all the state highway system, nearly 9,000 miles of it. The county judges still have their local property for roads and in addition are getting $1,800,000 a year back from the gasoline tax and license fees for local roads. All the burden of highways has been lifted from the lands, except about half of the cost of purely local roads, and that is spread over all property in the township. The old injustice has been wiped out. The new order is fair and equitable.

The unequal division of taxes has been to a degree remedied. After a long, hard battle, an income tax was written into the law of Arkansas in 1929. It declares the principle that profits and earning power without property shall share with property the costs of government. This new tax furnishes necessary new revenue for charity, for school equalization and for cutting the property tax—all objectives which must be approved by the responsible opinion of the state.

The local school tax levy limit has been raised by constitutional amendment from 12 to 18 mills, and the equalizing fund has been made a reality. A reasonable education is being brought within reach of every child of the state.

Has a machine accomplished these things—a machine that is vicious, corrupt, self-seeking, unscrupulous and intolerable? Or have they been done by men, sincerely engaged in the public service on behalf of the two million people who live in Arkansas?—Political Advertisement.

MR. JOHN J. SHINN

There is a reason why Konjola is a household word in tens of thousands of American homes: there is a reason why seven million bottles of Konjola were used in two years. That reason is just this—Konjola makes good, even when all else tried has failed. Consider the experience of Mr. John J. Shinn, R. F. D. No. 1, who states:

"I had constipation and rheumatism for three years, and I ached so that I could hardly do my work. I had severe pains in my back, and was up several times every night. But in three weeks Konjola gave great relief from rheumatism, and the bladder weakness and back pains are entirely gone. I am sure by the time that I finish the treatment of six bottles I will have my health back. Konjola did for me what all else I tried failed to do, and I shall always have Konjola in my home."

Quit experimenting... quit groping for the right medicine. Put your faith in Konjola, as countless thousands have, and you will be abundantly rewarded.

Konjola is sold in Hope, Ark., at Brian's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. Adv.
